PERSONALS.

Points About People Here and Elsewhere.

Mrs. T. E. Garrison and little daughter, Miss Daisy, who have been visiting friends and relatives in Ohio for the past three months, have returned home.

THE White Collar Company cleared during September and half of October, $38,000. Of this amount the Ohio made the most; the Boston next; the Morning Mail third, and the Bonanza fourth. The Fleetwood came out behind, although her receipts were larger than either of the others, but her expenses were greater.

QUITE a change will be made in the steamboats after the water rises. The Ohio is to be placed in the St. Louis and Huntington trade; the Fleetwood and Bostona will extend their trips to Marietta, and the Telegraph will take the place of the Ohio in the Pomeroy trade. The St. Lawrence will, it is stated, run to Pomeroy and the Sidney to Wheeling.

The account of the Ashland affair printed elsewhere has been telegraphed to the DAILY BULLETIN, by Hon. D. K. Weis, a well known and honored citizen of that place. It may be relied upon as correct in detail, though he has, inadvertently omitted to mention the firing upon the troops from the train, and from the landing at Ashland, which have been well established. The list of the killed and wounded is the only correct one that has yet been printed.

B. McAuley.

The Boston Journal in speaking of the appearance of this distinguished comedian in that city, says:

All the interest is not allowed to centre around one or two figures, but the play-wright has created an ensemble of characters, the relations of which to his hero bring out the latter against a strong and natural background. Uncle Dan's amusing adventures in search of John Smith, his dangerous encounters with sharp and roughs, his perplexities, disappointments, dangers and triumphs, his discovery of more than he started to find, and his general success at last are incidents all of which are admirably worked up, and from beginning to end the play holds undivided attention, its many strong points creating unbounded enthusiasm. As Uncle Dan, Mr. McAuley presents a clear cut type of the honest old resident of the back districts of our Eastern States. When the warm-hearted deputy sheriff appeared, the audience realized the presence of an honest plain-spoken, plain-dealing man, who has business before him, and who goes at it in a business like way. His humor, his anger, his sorrow are all natural, and control the feelings of those before him with a power that marks him as being a true artist. His trials create sympathy, his danger creates an intensity of interest, and his triumphs are regarded with unmistakable satisfaction.

DEFEATED LYNCHERS.

Statement of Wednesday's Affair by a Citizen of Ashland.

Correct List of the Killed and Wounded—The Excitement Abating—Citizens' Meeting to be Held.

Special to the DAILY BULLETIN.

ASHLAND, KY., Nov. 3, 1882.—Neal and Craft were granted a change of venue by Judge Brown to Carter county, on Tuesday. They were taken by the military at Catlettsburg aboard the Granite State. After the prisoners were put aboard the boat the streets leading to the landing were guarded by soldiers to prevent any attempt to rescue them. While in this situation a large number of men arrived from Ashland and appointed a committee to wait on Major Allen to demand the delivery of the prisoners to them. This the Major politely declined and ordered his men aboard the boat. The men from Ashland and a large number from Catlettsburg then boarded the train and left about the time the boat rounded out and arrived at Ashland ahead of her. There must have been five or six hundred men and boys on the train.

Several thousand persons had assembled on Front street, men, women and children to see the boat as she passed the city. Very little time elapsed before she rounded the point and as she came in full view of the landing, it was apparent that the soldiers apprehended an attack and were prepared for any that might be made. The crowd on the landing were greatly excited. There being no other boat at the wharf the ferryboat was boarded by from thirty to fifty men and boys, some of them armed with guns. The boat was headed for the Granite State. After the head of the boat was out toward the Ohio shore, some one on her hailed the steamer by waving a handkerchief, but she kept ahead of the ferryboat, all the time approaching her, and when about seventy-five yards from the Granite State a fire was opened on her by those on the ferryboat which was immediately returned by the soldiery.

Several persons on the ferryboat were slightly wounded, one of whom James McDonald has since died. The worst work was done among the citizens who were taking no hand in the matter, but were merely on Front street as spectators. The firing among the citizens was most wanton and unprovoked.

The following is a list of the killed and wounded:

Col. Lewis Reppard, while standing on top of the bank, shot through the heart and killed instantly.
George Keener, killed standing on the bank.
James McDonald, shot in the shoulder, since died. He was on the ferryboat.
John Bank, wounded, shot on the boat.
Charles Bollinger aged fifteen, leg badly shattered.
Graham Randall, shot in the shoulder, supposed to be mortally wounded.
Julius Simmons, shot in the leg.
Willie Searcy, boy, shot in the bowels.
William Springer, on the boat, shot in the shoulder.
Mart Dunlap, shot in the hip.
Mrs. Jack Searcy, shot in the shoulder.
Dr. Gill, shot slightly in the right arm.
Alexander Walton, shot in the hip.
Mrs. B. S. Butler, shot in the thigh, flesh wound.
A. H. Nixon, shot in the hand.
Thos. Bird, on the boat shot in the shoulder.
Martin Green, colored, shot in the leg.
Mr. Ball, shot in the leg.
John Gallagher, shot in the mouth and legs.
Robert Pritchard Ball, shot in the upper lip, while getting off the cars broke a small bone of his leg.

Some of the balls passed over the houses into the park and killed a cow. Great indignation is felt toward the military for firing among the crowd of men, women and children on Front street, who were there simply as spectators. The excitement, though somewhat abated, is still high. The dead will be buried to-day. A citizens' meeting will be held to-night. Circuit Court has adjourned until next Wednesday. D. K. WEIS.

Interview with a Passenger on the Granite State—Some Points Made Plain that have not yet Reached the Ears of the Public.

Cincinnati Times-Star.

"Was it lively?" said a passenger who came down on the Granite State, "well, it just was. It was like running a blockade during the war; the people were crazy."

"Tell us your experience."

"Well, it was an experience I want to shun next time. When the boat landed at Catlettsburg stages were run out as usual, the crew having no idea of a disturbance. The Captain was on the roof directing his crew, and afterwards went below to talk to a hog shipper. The first thing he knew a file of soldiers, comprising two companies, marched down the bank and took up a position on the boat's forecastle. The prisoners (Neal and Craft) were taken on board, and three companies remained on shore to keep back the crowd of people who followed the procession.

The commander of the brigade just took charge of the boat in regular military style, and she was regularly pressed into service, correct documents being served on the captain. If the crowd had made a demonstration then it would have been a terrible affair and no mistake. The boat backed out without any trouble, and shortly we saw the mob chasing the boat in a train of cars on shore. Angry fists were shook from the car windows, and shots were frequently fired by the mob, but the boat was too far out in the river to be touched. When Ashland was reached, and the ferryboat was seen to be in possession of the mob, the soldiers were drawn up on the roof, the guards and the lower decks. On the roof the soldiers on the left hand side of the boat were flat on their stomachs, and on the right hand side, below the skylights, another file was ranged. The first shot was fired by the mob, when several more followed. Then it was the soldiers let go. There was a whole volley fired, being mainly directed to the pilot house of the ferryboat. That is one reason why so many bullets reached the shore, although some inexperienced hands had hold of rifles, which were fired at random.

"By—I saw a fellow step boldly out on the deck of the ferryboat, take deliberate aim at our pilot and fire. The aim was so close that it splintered the windowsill of the pilot house. That pilot was a plucky fellow. He just threw open the sashes, remarking that he didn't want glass in his, and gave them a full unobstructed view of his person, coolly performing the duty of his watch. I believe his name is Brose Dennis.

"That made the soldiers mad and they let go. That shot aimed at our pilot was one of the first fired by the mob.

"Our pilot's conduct was strongly in contrast with the fellow on the ferryboat. When the first volley from the soldiers riddled his box he let go of the wheel and fell back. Then he jumped up and fell over again going through the sash to the deck below. How he escaped was a sort of a miracle, but I heard he was only hurt in the hand.

"It's strange no more were hurt than are reported. Captain Kirker was standing on the roof at the first fire when a bullet whizzed past his face and another went between his legs, both striking the chimney. Then he stepped to one side, and just then the soldiers back of him let go and bullets flew by his ears like hail stones. He hasn't a scratch. He was a pretty cool fellow and didn't show any scare at all.

"I saw another pretty cool chap sitting in a chair on the roof with his legs crossed and handling a revolver, which he loaded and fired as unconcerned as if he had been shooting at a common target. Bullets fell all about him, but he wasn't touched.

"The prisoners? Oh, yes; they showed some excitement but felt pretty safe.

"What made the soldiers return fire so readily, did you ask? Well, I'll tell you. While they were at Catlettsburg they met with all sorts of insults on the streets, being frequently called — cowardly curs, and that no collision occurred at Catlettsburg was remarkable. The militia felt last night sore toward the people, who boasted that if they undertook to capture Neal and Craft they would meet with no resistance. There were two or three companies of boys who were frightened nearly out of their wits, but there were a few determined old soldiers who had smelt powder before, and they were smarting under the treatment they had received by the populace. The crack gunner of the Louisville regiment was along with his big cannon, and could hardly be restrained from pouring its contents into the ferryboat. He carries numerous prizes for champion marksmanship, and if he had been permitted to spread himself there would have been frightful carnage. He just begged to be allowed to dislodge the locomotive of the train, which was rushing the mob to Ashland, and the boys all admitted that he could do it.

ROOF PAINTING.

A Few Plain Facts in Regard to TIN and IRON ROOFS.

Preserve your roofs by having a coat of

ARMSTRONG'S ELASTIC ROOF PAINT

Applied on them. After ten years test in different cities in the state of Kentucky, Armstrong's Elastic Roof Paint is acknowledged superior to any other in use. It forms a heavy elastic body smooth and glossy; it will not crack or scale, dries quickly and will remain without repainting from 8 to 10 years. This paint will stop all leaks in tin or iron roofs and remain so for many years. It has been applied to many of the best buildings, both public and private, in this state, of which I have testimonials to show from gentlemen whose standing in society and business qualifications makes their opinion and knowledge of its worth, after having tried it for years on their roofs, which of itself is the best of guarantees of its useful and valuable worth to all who have or metal roofs. If you have a leaky or a worn out roof that has decayed from neglect of being properly covered with paint, and it leaks and your thinner has failed to stop the leaks, give my paint a trial, and if I do not stop the leaks entirely there will be no charge made.

I will remain in this city a few days with the view of introducing my Elastic Paint, of which I am the inventor and manufacturer and sole owner. I manufacture but the two kinds, the Black Elastic and the Elastic Brown. Neither of these paint contain any linseed oil in their composition, and both being fire proof when applied on shingles or wood. The Black Elastic can stand more intense heat than any other paint made or known in this country, and is calculated for tin or iron roofs.
